Description of the Lunchtalk

This lunch talk aims to bring together healthcare professionals and researchers eager to explore the healthcare workforce challenges. This event will provide a platform for in-depth discussions on critical topics, including perceived workload, job-related stress, and the broader dynamics shaping workforce well-being.

Key themes will include the impact of organizational factors on healthcare quality and the well-being of healthcare workers. Participants will also have the opportunity to engage in meaningful exchanges about translating research into practice, exploring policy implications, and strategies to apply research findings in this critical domain into real-world setting.
